What Goes Up Must Come Down! James Montier A Little Detour into My Murky Past Nearly a quarter of a century ago, I was a young, naïve, and foolish believer in an economic concept known as rational expectations "an elegant, mathematically beautiful theory with no practical use. In Star Wars parlance, I had effectively been seduced by the dark side.

hold them up and work against the force of gravity. That's the reason that a rock and a feather will not fall and hit the ground at the same speed. Air slows down all falling objects on Earth. If you were to take lots of feathers and wad them into a large ball and drop it with the rock, they would fall at the same rate.
